

BRETT LANDSCAPING GAINS PRECAST SECTOR SUSTAINABILITY CHARTER

Leading concrete paving manufacturer Brett Landscaping now has even more to celebrate on its 100th anniversary after passing the first Precast Sector Sustainability Charter Audit. This achievement acknowledges a commitment of going beyond current legislation to ensure that its products and operations are sustainable. Inspectors particularly recognised the community liaison initiatives being run by Brett at its Cliffe site. The company will be rolling out similar initiatives at its other sites later this year.

In order to ensure that Brett Landscaping continues to remain at the forefront of sustainable operations, it has now committed to a range of ambitious principles for its business. These will ensure that it continues to monitor and use its resources as efficiently as possible and reduce its carbon footprint year on year.

Chris Droogan, Managing Director of Brett Landscaping was presented with a Charter Member certificate at the AGM of British Precast Concrete Federation on 12th May 2009. Commenting on the award, he said: "We take our responsibilities towards the environment and sustainability very seriously. Achieving this Charter Membership acknowledges the hard work put in by everyone at Brett to take voluntary actions and go beyond the legislation. Our commitment is long term and we look forward to working closely with British Precast to further improve our policies in the coming years."

This latest accolade comes on top of the company securing the BS EN ISO 14001 standard earlier in the year and highlights the commitment Brett has to minimising its impact on the environment.

Editor Notes:

Brett Landscaping is a major supplier of hard landscaping materials, sold almost exclusively through builders' merchants.

Ranges include block paving, decorative concrete and natural stone flag paving and decorative aggregates.

The commercial range includes paving and specialist kerbs, such as Trief and Kassel and the Brett Flow range of permeable paving solutions. These are all supported with a comprehensive customer service package covering design, delivery, technical, marketing and sales generation.
